

Waiting for Katherine

It seems I have been waiting for Katherine my whole life.

From the day I was born I knew out there somewhere was someone who would want me and be my wife.

I didn't mind those early days of waiting since I was too busy searching for me and you.

The day we met was so sweet, because I knew my waiting was now complete.

Building a life and family with you was a quest we both embraced

As we shared a life of love and happiness.

It continued to grow over the years until fate stepped in and changed my joy to tears.

You left and my life changed once again, back to that empty world before we were blessed.

So now here I am once again waiting for you alone and distressed.

It's different this time, since I know you are not very far

And I will be joining you soon to continue on.

Our destinies are shared because we are now one, and Katherine

I will forever be waiting for you because you are the other half of my heart and soul.

By

G. A. Blackburn

